Separation From Town of Westerly

er the advisability of seeking legis-lative action for the separation of Watch Hill from the town of Westerly

Timothy, Cronin, a recent gradu and becoming an independent town, will make report to a special meeting of the Watch Hill fire district, Monday. Realizing the folly of applying for a charter that would have less for a charter that would have less than thirty bona-fide residents, the promoters have made unsuccessful effort to get residents of the Avondale section to favor the scheme, and share the increased burden of taxation, and all for the pleasure of summer residents at Watch Hill.

The separatists are few in number and it is said they are in the main the same individuals who were the strongest opponents to the rebuilding of the est opponents to the rebuilding of the Pawcarnck Valley street railroad. Now it is said that in some instances there was method in the opposition. was method in the opposition.

It is a known fact that to complete the proposed improvement of Eay street, which has been undertaken by the Watch Hill fire district, more money than has been appropriated will be required, but this work could not go on until after the trolley road was completed in that section. This was completed in that section. This being so there would be no actual need being so there would be no actual need for money in connection with the proposed improvement for another season at least. The taxpaying population of the town of Westerly, aside from the few in the Watch Hill district, do not take this separation idea seriously, and therefore whatever opposition that will be manifested at the meeting will come direct from the residents of the village of Watch Hill.

The trolley road building contractors The trolley road building contractors are pushing the work along as rapidly as possible and with the least possible inconvenience to the public. The work is handicapped however, in the contractors being unable to secure a sufficient number of laborers, and therefore the new fails from Pleasant View junction to Watch Hill are not being laid as fast as was anticipated at the hearing before the town council when hearing before the town council when permission was granted to complete the work, after a restraining injunc-tion had been dissolved by a superior ourt judge. If present plans are not interfered If present plans are not interfered with, the tracks from Pleasant View terminal will be extended two miles toward Weekapaug, before the contractors ship their working outlit from Westerly. Near the end of this proposed line the trolley company owns a large tract of land with water privileges, which will be connected with an amusement park with large pavilion for dancing. After this is completed the rails will be extended a mile further to Weekapaug, thus makmile further to Weekapaug, thus mak-ing the amusement park convenient to the sister shore resorts.

But for the prompt assistance of the Connecticut troops at Fort Mansfield, Connecticut troops at Fort Mansfield, who are there on annual duty four, and a detachment of regulars, the Halcyon house, formerly the Peninsular house, at Watch Hill, located on the Mansfield road, adjoining the government reservation, would have been consumed by fire, Wednesday, While the guests were at dinner a soldier in passing discovered a fire on the roof of the veranda at the east end of the

The animal was known to be a kicker when being shod and the customary precautions were taken by the horseshoer, among which was the lashing of the horse's leg. This lashing broke and before young Cronin could get out of the way he was kicked in the head and rendered unconscious, blood flowing from two deep cuts just over the nose, near the connection with the forehead. deep cuts just over the nose, near the connection with the forehead.

Dr. Barber was called and washed the wound and gave temporary dressing. It is evident that young Cronin was struck by the toe calk of the shoe directly under the forward part of the skull and between the eyes, causing a fracture and breaking the upper part of the nose and cutting gashes in either side. It is possible that the sight of the eyes was not injured. The doctor stopped the flow of blood, washed and dressed the wounds and advised that the injured man be given hospital treatment. He was taken from Westerly on the 1.50 train for Providence, for treatment in the Rhode Island hospital.

The Country's Growth,

The preliminary reports that are being made public by the census bureau leavy precentages of gain are score by some of the cities. It would be un-tafe, however, to assume from this pircumstances that the ratio of fedcircumstances that the ratio of federal increase is in a way to be advanced appreciably. It is possible that the phenomenon known as the "city drift," which has been for some decades in evidence, will play an important part in this census as in the recent past. Returns from the farming districts must be awaited before any computation is permissible regarding the national population. These returns are fower than the city figures.

Judging from all appearances, the national population will be somewhere betwen ninety-one millions and nine-ty-five millions. There is no likelihood of it reaching 100,000,000, as has been lately suggested by enthusiastic students of the count. Nor is there any particular reason to wish for that figure. This is a growing country and its attainments of the hooded.

figure. This is a growing country and its attainments of the hundred million mark will very seon be reached, permark will very seen be reached, perhaps too soon for the good of the nation. The point of saturation is yet far distant as regards the entire area of the United States, but in some places it has been passed. The chief problem of today is to effect a more even distribution of the population by spreading the new-comers from other countries throughout the smaller circles and the urban area justed of perles and the urban area instead of per-mitting them to settle in the places of their initial landing. - Washington

Moved to Waterbury.

Mr. and Mrs. James Moore and children, who have been residents of Danielson for several years, have gone to Waterbury, where they will make the tit would be used to send the apparatus up there, for there is no hydrant system in Pomfret, and the hose could not be used. The best he could do would be to organize a bucket brigade. The voice and other voices of persons evidently standing near the telephone kept calling for a company to be sent, however.

Chief Wilson was, of course, unable to comply with the request, which was a quite useless and unreasonable one. There is no member of the department but would be willing to give aid in fighting a fire in another town, if necessary, but the sending of apparatus to a place without an adequate water system is out of the question. It was learned Wednesday that the fire was only a small one, and hardly worthy of the turmoil that it caused.

the future:

'During months since January more members have joined the grange than in the same six months for 1969, and patrons in Connecticut are waking up to the fact that they are not getting their share in matters of legislation, education and in those things which pertain to the uplift of rural life to which they are entitled. A more determined effort for progress is in evidence, and the outlook for the future is that they will be likely to ask for what they need and not so willing to take what is given them. We suggest and urge that every patron attend at least one of these meetings and get a broader idea of the work which the grange is doing and of some of the things for which we will need your assistance to accomplish."
